EAS Is here to help - UAC

The Educational Access Scheme (EAS) can help applicants who have experienced significant educational disadvantage receive an offer to university.

In essence, EAS could boost your selection rank to a course if circumstances beyond your control have negatively impacted your Year 11 or 12 or equivalent studies.

'We understand that life can be hard and this can impact study,' said Adam Hennessy from UAC's Access team.

'If you have been disadvantaged in Year 11 and/or 12 (or equivalent), please apply for EAS.

Once you've finished your undergraduate application, you'll see a link to apply for EAS. You can also apply any time you log back in to your application. Just use the tab at the top of the application.

University of Sydney - Health Economics to support understanding microeconomics

Tuesday 20 July, 4 – 4.45pm

Healthcare is a rich setting in which to study economics. While much of economics avoids discussing value judgements and focus on questions that have objective and verifiable answers, all policies are ultimately based on a value judgement. It is impossible to avoid discussing the values that lie behind the policy in health economics. In this talk, we will examine the key questions such as how we decide what is fair, while looking at some examples from the COVID-19 policy response. This talk is suitable for Year 11-12 students.
